The style of the APA (American Psychological Association) requires two elements: in the text of the quote throughout the job, and the reference list at the end. Include the source information in the text of your assignment: the name of the author or authors in the year of publication page number (see below for more information). The quotes can be placed at the end of the sentence until the punctuation is completed in brackets. To paraphrase the source in your own words, hang students to remember the information and then check their memory was a consistent criterion for pedagogy (Broudy, 1998). Brody (1998, p. 8) explains that memorable memory does not lead to the ability to solve problems. The quote (exact words from the source) Brody (1998, p. 9) states that, according to the general criteria of schooling, our selective citizens failed because they cannot reproduce the necessary skills or apply the relevant principles.2 End: LinksIn the end of the text, include a list of links; a single list of all the sources of information you have stated in your assignment. Start the help list on the new page and headline its Links. Center the title on the page. Each record must have a hanging indentation. Each item on the list requires specific bibliographic information. For example, in the case of a book, bibliographic details relate to: author/editor, year of publication, title, publication, place of publication and publisher, how found on the front pages (some details will vary). Volpe, A. (1988). Within the walls of the school. London, England: Routledge.Woods, K. and Griffiths, A. (1995). The real McCoy. World of Design, 12 (3), 2-13.List each element in alphabetical order (by the author's surname). The headlines should be in history. All references on the list should also be included in the text. When to include page numbers, when you quote a source (play the material word for word), page numbers are not required. When rephrasing or linking to an idea contained in another work, APA Publishing is the guide of the 6th edn. (p. 171) encourages you to provide page numbers to help the reader find information in the long text. However, this is not a requirement. Procons!.: Contact the lecturer about their preferences for including or deleting page numbers to paraphrase the information in your assignments. Next: As quoted using APA links there are two parts of the link: the quotes in the text of the document and the reference list at the end of the document. The APA's reference style is the author-date style, so the quote in the text consists of the author (s) and the year of publication given in full or in part in round brackets. Use only the author's surname (s), followed by a comma and a year of publication. Include pages, chapters, or section numbers if you need to be specific, for example, if you quote, paraphrase or summarize: No distinction between books, magazine articles, internet documents, or other formats, except electronic that don't provide page numbers. In this case, use a paragraph number, if any, with the acronym para. Full information about the source is listed in the help list at the end of the document: the reference list entries contain all the information you need to follow up with your source. Reference lists in APA are arranged in alphabetical order by the author. For more information on how to create links for specific resources, such as books, magazines, and web pages, you can find it in the reference list or in all examples. This is a complete guide to APA (American Psychological Association) in the text and reference list of quotes. This easy-to-use, comprehensive guide makes citing any source easy. Check out our other quote guides on MLA 8 and Harvard links. The main components of the APA reference: Back to the top of the reference list is the full list of links used in parts of the letter, including the author's name, publication date, title and more. APA reference list should: Be on the new page at the end of the document Be focused To be in alphabetical order on behalf of the first author (or the title if the author is not known, in this case, and should be ignored) If there are several works by the same author they are ordered by date, if the works are in the same year they are ordered in alphabetical order by name and highlighted letters (and b, c, etc.) After the date Contain full links to all in the text links used back to top In text links should be included after using the quote or paraphrase taken from another part of the work. The quotations in the text are quotations in the main text and refer to a direct quote or paraphrase. They match the link in the main reference list. These quotes include the author's name and the date of publication. Using the example of author James Mitchell, this takes shape: Mitchell (2017) states ... Or... (Mitchell, 2017). The structure of this change depends on whether a direct quote or bracket is used: Direct quote: The quote should follow the quote directly and contain a page number after the date, for example (Mitchell, 2017, p.104). This applies to all of these variations. Parental: You don't need a page number. Two authors: The surname of both authors is stated with either 'and' or ampersand between. For example: Mitchell and Smith (2017) state ... Or... (Mitchell and Smith, 2017). Three, four or five authors: For the first lead, all names must be listed: Mitchell, Smith, and Thomson (2017) State ... Or... (Mitchell, Smith, Thomson, 2017). Next leads can be a short name of the first author followed et al: Mitchell et al (2017) state ... Or... (Mitchell et al., 2017). Six or more authors: Only the surname of the first author should be specified followed et al. see No authors: If the author is unknown, should use the first few words of reference. This is usually the name of the source. If this is the title of a book, periodical, brochure or report, there must be For example: (Citation Guide, 2017). If it's the title of an article, chapter, or web page, it should be quoted. For example: (APA Citation, 2017). Referring to authors with several works from one year: Works should be quoted with A, B, C etc following the date. These letters are assigned in a reference list, which is sorted in alphabetical order by the first author's name. For example: (Mitchell, 2017a) Or (Mitchell, 2017b). Referring to several works in the same brackets: If these works are the same author, the surname is indicated once followed by dates in chronological order. For example: Mitchell (2007, 2013, 2017) Or (Mitchell, 2007, 2013, 2017) If these works are written by several authors, the references are ordered in alphabetical order by the first author, divided by the overseas as follows: (Mitchell and Smith 2017; Thomson, Coyne, and Davis, 2015). Referring to a group or organization: The first reference requires using the full group name. This can then be reduced. For example: First quote: (International Citation Association, 2015) Further quotes: (Association of citations, 2015) Referring to a secondary source: In this situation the original author and date should be specified first followed by as cited in the follow-up author and date of the secondary source. For example: Lorde (1980) as cited in Mitchell (2017) Or (Lorde, 1980, as cited in Mitchell, 2017) Back to the beginning In the text of the quote does not change depending on the type of source if the author is unknown. References to the list of citations are very variable depending on the source. The reference to books is the most basic style; it fits the pattern above, minus the URL section. Thus, the main format of the reference to the book is as follows: Examples of references to books: Mitchell, J.A., Thomson, M., Coyne, R.P. (2017). A citation guide.
